Heavy ‘first net’ after ending of fishing ban

One ship brought back more than 10 tons of swimming crab

By Huang Hai

‘Arrived at the shore! The first net of swimming crab is coming after ending of fishing ban!’ at 2 August noon, in front of a port of Lvsi fishing port south island of Qidong, once Suqiyu 03298 pulled in to the shore, workers who had been waiting on the port for a long time went forward, ‘moved’ baskets of fat swimming crab from the cabin to the port along a sliding rail...

On 1 August, some fishing boats of Lvsi fishing port ended summer season fishing ban, and set sail to catch mainly swimming crab. At 2 August noon, cargo ships which set off together with fishing boats returned fully loaded one after another. Zhejiang resident Zhao Jisong, who had waited at the port silently for a long time, was the owner of the batch of goods. He smiled with joy, looking at baskets of swimming crab. He told the reporter that 7 fishing boats were fishing for the company at sea, and they could bring back at least more than 30 tons of swimming crab every day. No.03298 which came back on that day was loaded with more than 10 tons of swimming crab in total. The crabs were transported to places all over the state by fresh food transport vehicles and will be on dinner tables of people all over the state soon.
